

Camden Obtains Right of Way on Highway to Hope

County Judge Clears Way For Ouachita County End

ENDS WITH NEVADA

Hempstead Has Gravel Up To Neighbor County Line

Another step forward on construction plans for the Camden half of the Hope-Camden highway, which passes through Rosston and the lower end of Nevada county, was reported yesterday from Camden.

The Camden News says that County Judge W. J. Jordan has obtained a court order for the right-of-way in Ouachita county, and has turned it over to the State Highway Department.

The survey for the new road was completed so far as Ouachita county is concerned, some time ago, and plans for the clearing and grading of the highway route to the Ouachita-Nevada county line, are ready to be turned over to the contract division of the highway department.

The Ouachita end of the project will probably be contracted for in June, according to advice from Camden.

At the Hope end of the road, the local district engineer, R. B. Stanford, has completed gravel surfacing as far as the Hempstead-Nevada county line. About 11 miles additional is graded into Nevada county, but for the most part the Nevada county section of the road is untouched.

Hope has been promised grade and gravel as far as Rosston this year. Mr. Stanford and the Camden district engineer, L. R. Plemmons, agreed some time ago on the probable route across Nevada county, and with the construction from Camden went to the Nevada line. It is probable that the sole remaining link from Rosston east will be filled in, to give a continuous all-weather road from Hope direct to Camden.

Schools Merged In North County

Big Consolidation of Districts Around McCaskill

One of the largest school consolidation projects in the history of Hempstead county has been carried in the district around McCaskill, county school authorities announced today.

The new McCaskill special school district will include the old districts at Belton, McCaskill, Friendship and Avery's Chapel, principal points in northwestern Hempstead county. This comprises practically all the territory between Belvins and Tokio.

An important factor entering into the consolidation plan is the construction of the new state road from Belvins west to McCaskill and Nashville. This gives northern Hempstead county its first east-and-west road, and will make possible year-round transportation of school children by bus.

State crews are at work on the Belvins-McCaskill road, and will have it completed this summer, it is expected. The road was located a year ago, but the state rejected all contractors' bids, and is building the road with its own forces. The grade work is progressing fast, and will be surfaced with gravel. The highway practically parallels the Prescott & Northwestern Railroad, and traverses an important truck farming region.

Miss Mary Arnold Serves As Hostess; Alexander Is Speaker

The Hope B. & P. W. Club held its first meeting of the month at the Hotel Barlow Tuesday evening, with Miss Mary Ellington Arnold, superintendent of the Josephine hospital of this city, hostess. TEXARKANA, Ark., May 8.—(AP)—A score or more of women arrested by federal and state authorities since was declared on women bootleggers of southwest Arkansas and northeast Texas last summer will come before two court sessions opening here May 12.

Every woman scheduled to appear before the courts is the mother of from three to eight children including a gray-haired mother of sixty and two 25-year-old widows.

Six of 14 women arrested in federal raids in Miller county, Ark., last July, at the outset of the campaign against women liquor vendors, will be tried in the western federal district court of Arkansas. Mrs. Caledonia Burns, 60-year-old resident of Hempstead county, Ark., will face trial in the same court along with her youngest son.

Two 25-year-old widows will face trial on charges of bootlegging in Bowie district court, while appeals of two other women who have been sentenced to one-year are pending in the same court.

The first women liquor violators in the Texarkana area were arrested in a sweeping series of raids conducted by Deputy Prohibition Administrator S. M. Gurley, of Arkansas, last July. Seven white women and seven negro women were arrested in those raids.

The arrests of these women led Gurley to make the statement that 75 per cent of the liquor being sold in southwest Arkansas was being peddled by women, declaring at the same time that men relatives and friends of the women were hiding behind petticoats to escape the penalties for such activities. He instructed his men to be as "hard-boiled" with women violators as with the men, saying "the days of southern chivalry are gone."

Bowie county Texas, authorities next took up the liquor raids in that county, arrested a stocking-less flapper and brought her before Judge G. W. Ragland on a charge of bootlegging.

Judge Ragland reacted bitterly to the appearance of the young woman before him and declared, "I'm tired of women appearing before me and begging for sympathy because they are women. Women are now wearing the pants, smoking cigarettes, holding men's jobs, acting like men, and from

Two Convicts At Ohio Penitentiary Accidentally Shot

Dead Are Believed to Be James Ross and Alfred Freeman

ASLEEP WHEN KILLED

400 Unruly Convicts Fire Prison Stockade Last Night

COLUMBIA, Ohio, May 8.—(AP)—Two sleeping Ohio penitentiary convicts were accidentally killed by machine gun bullets today. A weapon, mounted in the prison yard after last night's stockade fire was inadvertently discharged by Ohio National Guardsmen.

The victims were asleep in the "E" and "F" dormitories when a bullet passed through the barred windows and struck both men in the head. The two convicts were almost instantly killed. The dead men are believed to be James W. Ross and Alfred Freeman, the latter a negro. Ross was serving 10 to 15 years for burglary and grand larceny, while Freeman was serving 10 to 20 years on a charge of manslaughter.

Identification of the two is not certain. Guardsmen pointed out that nearly all numbers of prisoners had been confused due to the disastrous Easter Monday fire when 320 convicts were killed by fire and smoke.

A third convict was wounded. Col. Robert S. Haubrich, ranking guard officer at the prison reported the shooting occurred about 6 a. m. He said following last night's fire in the stockade where some 400 unruly convicts fired 88 tents inside the barbed wire enclosure, and that machine guns were mounted out in the prison yard to prevent any break for liberty. Four hours after the regular breakfast hour, convicts where only one lonely tent survived the fire, had not been fed. Col. Haubrich said "we are too busy doing other things to feed them."

The case was brought by Ed Bennet as the taxpayer, and was dismissed when the complainant refused to amend the complaint. The suit dismissed today involves purchases made last year of a large quantity of syrup for the state hospital and 200 pairs of shoes for the state penitentiary.

Bennet contended the purchases were not made with competitive bidding. Chipman presented his resignation following the filing of the first suit. Other officials involved in the case were Dr. L. Brown, superintendent of the state hospital and Alfred Reed, superintendent of the state penitentiary.

McCoy Denied Bond In Shooting Affair

Stamps Man Is Bound Over to Nevada Jury After Hearing

PRESCOTT, May 8.—Obe McCoy 30, was held to await action of the Nevada grand jury without bond on a murder charge for the slaying of Mrs. Sellers Phillips, 40, near Fulton last Friday at a preliminary hearing held before Peace Justice W. J. White Wednesday.

McCoy was returned to the county jail after the hearing. The only witness presented by the state was Ben McCoy, brother of the defendant, at whose home the fatal shooting occurred. The slain woman was a sister of Ben McCoy's wife.

Ben McCoy testified that Obe fired at him with a shotgun and that he grappled with his brother. Ben said he threw Obe down across the bed and took the gun away from him, removing the remaining shell from it.

The shot fired by Obe, according to Ben, struck Mrs. Phillips in the head, killing her almost instantly. Obe fled but was captured in a farmhouse in the southern part of Nevada county early Sunday morning.

The two brothers are alleged to have engaged in an altercation growing out of Obe's accompanying county and federal officers on raids on two stills a few hours before the shooting. Obe is said to have been berated by Ben for taking part in the raid and the quarrel followed.

Obe has told officers that the shooting was accidental. He said he, his brother and his brother's wife were grappling over the shotgun when it discharged. Obe charged that Ben was the one who had picked up the gun.

Trio Loots Nashville Shop of $100 in Goods

NASHVILLE, May 8.—Breaking down a front door, burglars early Tuesday night entered a shop here owned by Clarence Richardson and escaped with a quantity of metal goods valued at more than $100.

The robbers were described by E. E. Warner, a neighbor living near the shop, as three rough looking men who drove up to the building in an open car. Warner, becoming suspicious when the trio began to pounce the front door, notified officers.

The men, however, made their escape before the authorities arrived on the scene and an automobile chase ensued in which the officers were outdistanced, after trailing the three as far as Red river.

Officers in all towns between Nashville and Texarkana were notified and the highway was being watched closely.

The robbery is the second that has occurred here within the last three days. At Sunday night, the Ritchie Grocery company was robbed of approximately $500 in groceries.

Hope Man Named Head of Arkansas Morticians Ass'n

R. V. Herndon Elected President of Arkansas Group

SUCCEEDS PRATOR

Little Rock Is Chosen Meeting Place For 1931 Session

LITTLE ROCK, May 8.—R. V. Herndon of Hope was unanimously elected president of the Arkansas Morticians' Directors' Association Tuesday at the annual convention at the Hotel Magnolia. Mr. Herndon succeeded Mr. O. Prator of Magnolia.

Other officers elected are: E. Putnam, Fort Smith; vice-president, C. Albert Roth, Little Rock; secretary, W. B. Langford, Jonesboro; chaplain, W. M. Stival, Hope; sergeant at arms, and Oscar F. Smith, members of the state board of embalmers.

Following a hotly contested fight on the convention floor, between Little Rock, Texarkana and Fort Smith for the 1931 meeting place, Little Rock emerged the victor.

Reports and other business matters concluded the two-day program of the association.

A brief address was delivered by Mayor Ross Lawhorn of North Little Rock, in which he extended greetings on behalf of his city to the delegates.

A unique item on the morning program was the address "How to Sell and Not to Sell," by C. B. Williams of Arkansas City, with a demonstration, and the actual sale of goods by Mr. Murry to Mr. M. C. Griffith of Harrisburg. A talk on "Technicalogy," by Alfred Leymer, Little Rock, was also given, with roundtable discussion following.

In his annual message to the convention, M. D. Prator of Magnolia said:

"I want to commend the Arkansas Board of Embalmers for the progressive spirit that they have shown. Our board has always been one of the most progressive in the United States, and has done much to raise the standard of the profession in Arkansas."

We are under obligations to the board for the fine lectures and demonstrations by Professor Clement Williams, Kansas City, of the Williams Institute of Embalming.

Interested membership in the state association was stressed by President Prator, pointing out that the men on the outside of the organization, not coming to it, but it will be necessary to go out and get them to join. "I am convinced," said Mr. Prator, "that for a state organization to succeed, as it should, it must, at least have a majority of the eligibles on its rolls. The Arkansas association has not reached this goal yet." He also stressed the importance of co-operation for a larger and better association. Legislation was cited which would benefit the funeral directors, and this matter will be presented at the next session of the state legislature, he said.

The sheriff said inspection of the scene indicated the man had been dragged about 50 yards along the highway. His head was crushed beyond recognition.

It was said at the white house that no decision on his next choice has been reached and that no statement would be made by the President at this time. It was indicated that nothing will be said today.

It is believed the President will choose another nominee for the vacant post in time for confirmation at this session of congress.

could not be estimated in dollars and cents. It was brought out that coming together in club work constituted a beginning; staying together, made for progress and working together harmoniously resulted in success.

The programs, favors and souvenirs given those attending the convention were exhibited, as was the scrap book which was entered by the Hope club in the scrap book contest. The state federation of B. & P. W. Clubs now has a membership of 1,418 members, twelve new clubs having been organized during the past year. ## "Vagabond King" Opens at Saenger

Famous Musical Show on Screen Thursday and Friday

One of the great artistic productions of the motion picture business, "The Vagabond King," opened at the Public-Saenger theatre here last night for a three-day run.

Because of the appearance of the stage show here last year, the first-night audience was curious as to the comparative quality of the two performances. What they saw on the talking screen, however, was a superb entertainment for ear and eye.

Dennis King, brilliant star of the original New York company, gave a thrilling interpretation of the life of Francois Villon, vagabond poet who sat on the throne of France for a night and a day, and who because of it was condemned to death.

Laying opposite him was the charming Jeanette MacDonald, whose gorgeous voice thrilled audiences attending "The Love Parade" in which she appeared with Maurice Chevalier. Manager Matt Press has decorated the Saenger especially for the showing of "The Vagabond King," which runs through Friday. The lobby is brilliant with roses, donated by members of the Saturday Kids club, reminding theatre-goers that one of the great songs of "The Vagabond King" is "Only a Rose."

Politicians And Crime

DURING the first few years after the war it was customary to speak of our "crime wave" as if it were an abnormal thing arising directly out of the war. Lately, thoughtful people have come to realize that this was a faulty way of looking at things. We have a great deal of crime, to be sure, and the situation sometimes seems to be getting worse instead of better; but it is wrong to speak of it as a "wave," and it is a mistake to blame it all on the war.

Instead, it is becoming apparent that the prevalence of crime in America is due to some fundamental defects in our social organization. A city like Chicago, for example, is not going to clean up its crime situation without indulging first in a house-cleaning all the way down the line. Tinkering will not do the trick; nor, apparently, will laws that merely call for stiffer sentences and fewer paroles.

Frank J. Loesch, who spent years studying the situation as chairman of the Chicago Crime Commission, is about as well qualified to speak as anyone. Addressing the members of Oshattanooga University's Institute of Justice recently, he had this to say:

"We must not only have a revision of our criminal law procedure, but we must have police with modern technical knowledge to fight the criminal on his own ground. Organized crime exists only in the alliance with corrupt politicians who control patronage in law enforcing agencies, from the policeman on beats up through minor magistrates, court attaches, judges and members of legislatures.

"One of the basic troubles we have is illiteracy in the large proportion of foreign element in Chicago as well as among negroes. This illiteracy is used by corrupt politicians to produce required majorities.

"With revision of every state constitution, which must come soon if we are to avoid a social revolution, the illiterate voter must be disfranchised after a reasonable time is given to qualify the voter, and the right to vote given to men and women only who intelligently use the English language."

Now you may not agree with Mr. Loesch's conclusions at all. It is quite obvious, for instance, that mere literacy does not insure the casting of an intelligent vote. But his remarks are worth noting, if only because they indicate the real extent of the problem. Something drastic will have to be done. No half-way measures will do much good.

A Revolution In India

AFTER remaining at liberty, much against his will, for a whole month of "passive resistance," Mahatma Gandhi is at last under arrest, lodged in an Indian jail for an indefinite period on an indefinite charge; and the revolt of India against British rule enters a new phase in which anything can happen.

There is a drama about the whole thing that gives it an unusual appeal. The spectacle of this ragged, poverty-stricken Indian defying the might of the great British empire, and trying to launch a revolution by adopting a policy of turning the other cheek, is as compelling as it is unusual. Revolutions are not ordinarily started this way.

Meanwhile, the situation rapidly gets more serious. If a great deal of bloodshed does not develop in the next few months the English will have cause to congratulate themselves. Not since the days of the Indian mutiny has the Indian problem been as troublesome.

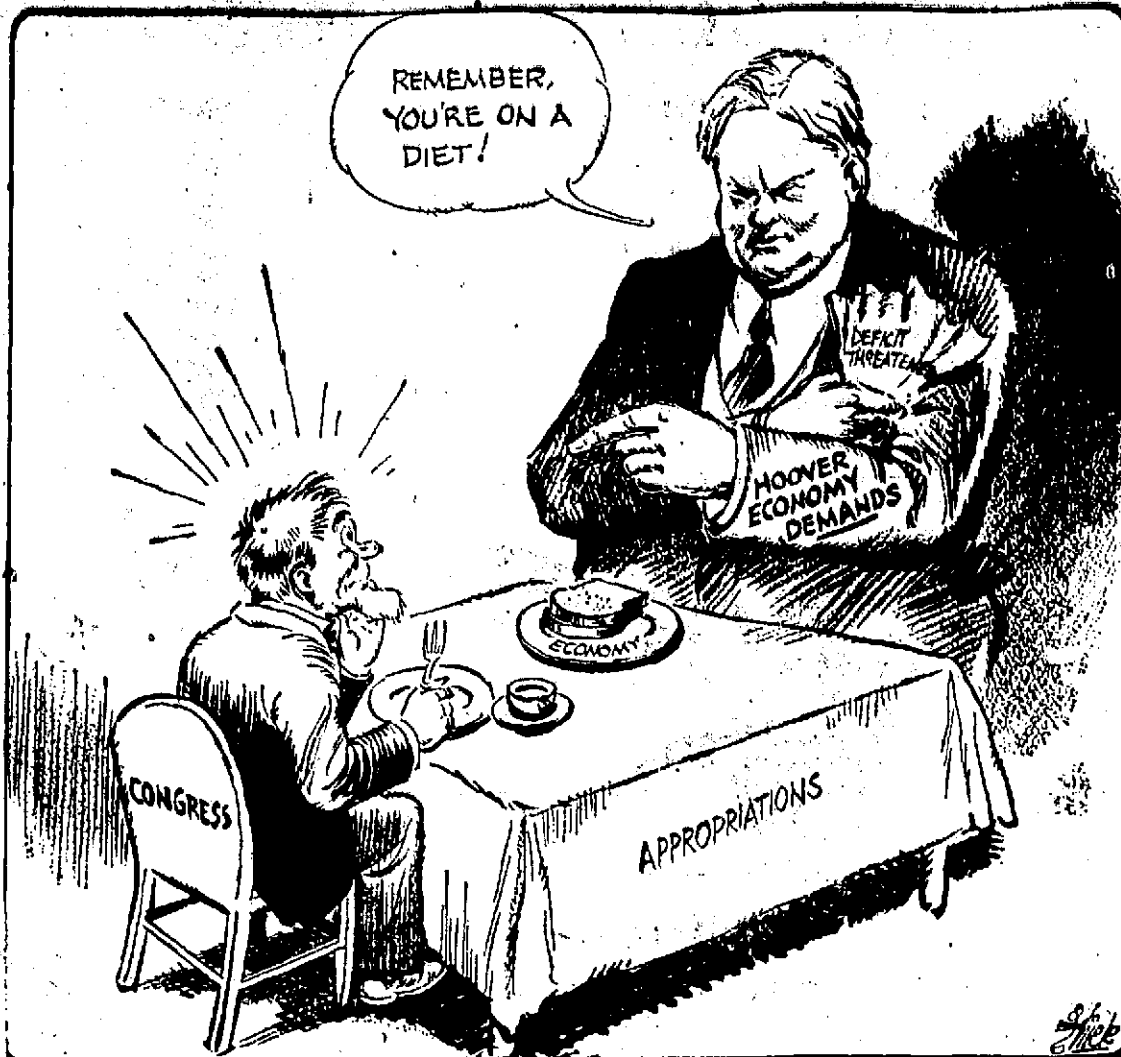

Gandhi's followers demand absolute, immediate independence. England will undoubtedly make many concessions, but this demand will never be granted—not unless there is an overturn more stupendous than anything now in sight. In the end, it is possible that an offer of dominion status will be made and accepted. Observers of this situation say that this would satisfy the majority of native leaders, if it were certain that it would be put into effect fairly soon and not left to the indefinite future.

The jailing of Gandhi may bring matters to a head. The little agitator has insisted from the beginning that his followers refrain from acts of violence; but will he be able to restrain them while he is in jail? It is not possible that his imprisonment will stir them to a resentment that will culminate in bloody riots?

Much hinges on the answers to those questions. The Indians themselves will be well-advised if they keep the peace. Their boycott of British goods puts a tremendous pressure on the home government at Downing street, since it intensifies England's already bad industrial situation; but open violence will only make the government more determined to put the rebellious element in its place.

Not since the World war has any British government faced so ticklish a situation. The next few months are likely to see some stirring events of major historical importance.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON—Politics runs right through the war and woe of the controversy over the appointment of Judge John J. Parker to the United States supreme court. Politics may not be the most important factor because there are vital and fundamental issues involved, but politics seems to have been a determining factor in each development from the very start.

All of which is not calculated to make the eight sitting justices very happy. Goodness knows they had their feathers ruffled during the bitter, unprecedented Senate fight over the Hughes nomination. A majority of senators finally got Hughes on the bench, but only after a strong minority which contained the best constitutional lawyers in Congress had well nigh destroyed the sacrosanctity previously associated with the highest tribunal. Now the court has found its vacancy involved in a political mess which couldn't help but affect its prestige still further, regardless of the outcome of the contest.

Known as a Politician

In the first place, the youthful Judge Parker's public record was largely political. He has been on the bench only since 1925. He had made some good campaigns as a Republican candidate for office and his appointments as an assistant to Attorney General Daugherty and to the federal circuit bench might properly be regarded as political rewards. No one has charged that Parker was merely a politician, but politics was his main background.

In the second place, not even the White House appears to deny that the political factor was very important in Parker's appointment to the supreme court. Nothing seems to have been found in his record to inspire his elevation to such an exalted judicial position. President

Hoover is making the appointment, but he refused to follow his customary practice of issuing a list of those who had recommended the nominee. Naturally, nearly every one jumped to the conclusion that Parker had been nominated because he was a very eminent North Carolina Republican and because North Carolina is a southern state where the Republicans have a chance in elections that ought to be nourished.

Partisan politics has to be counted in again when one considers all the Democrats opposing Parker. Senators Norris and Borah, leading the anti-Parker forces, are not commonly suspected of selfish motives in this case, but some of the strength behind them has unquestionably been there because some senators are happy to embarrass the administration at any and all times.

But for anyone who can stand off and view the situation with a cold, unprejudiced eye the most amusing angle arises when one considers that the same brand of partisan politics supposed to have figured in the nomination was responsible for the desertion of the administration by senators who considered the preservation of their own political hides much more vital than the preservation of Mr. Hoover's political prestige.

That is, quite a number of Republican senators, ordinarily 100 per cent loyal to the administration, feared the wrath of groups among their constituents far more than the ire of the president. They began to write as soon as it appeared that the labor organizations were very violently opposed to Parker's confirmation. But they didn't write long; each one had thousands of votes at stake and those up for re-election this year especially had no trouble making up their minds.

Messers reported a nice time.

Pearl Monts spent Monday night with Estell Purcell of Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. uth Mitchell were shopping in Hope Friday.

Remember next Sunday afternoon May 11, is our singing time, everyone is invited to come and bring your books and some body with you.

SULPHATE of AMMONIA

TO Mr. J. V. Cochran, of Marietta, Ga., Southeastern Champion in 1928, goes national first prize in the 1929 Cotton Stalk Contest.

Mr. Cochran gives much of the credit for his big yields of cotton to his complete fertilizer program. Both years his fertilizer method was the same. First, a complete fertilizer applied 600 lbs. to the acre before planting and 600 lbs. six weeks later. Second, a side-dresser of 300 lbs. of Arcadian Sulphate of Ammonia in three applications of 100 lbs. each.

Mr. Cochran declares that his experience has convinced him that farmers will get a return of at least $2 for every dollar spent for fertilizer above 200 lbs. and up to 800 lbs. per acre.

Every one can't win first prize but every one can win extra dollars profit from his crops by following Mr. Cochran's method. Whatever you grow—cotton, corn, grain, vegetables or fruit—plenty of nitrogen in your mixed fertilizer and again in your side-dressing stimulates the growth that means early maturity, higher yield and better quality. Nitrogen is the element that makes plants grow.

300 BOLL STALK OF SEED COTTON which won National Grand Prize, at Dallas, Texas. Grown by J. V. Cochran, of Marietta, Georgia, in the same field and under the same complete fertilizer program as last year's Southeastern champion.

In mixed fertilizer or top-dressing there is no better source of nitrogen than Sulphate of Ammonia. Arcadian Sulphate is fine and dry and contains 20.56 per cent nitrogen, guaranteed—all soluble, all quickly usable by the plants. It is an American product made by the American industry for American agriculture.

To be sure of your supply, order Arcadian from your dealer when you buy your mixed fertilizer. Farmers everywhere are invited to write The Barrett Company for information about their nitrogen fertilizer problems. Address our nearest office.

 LARDNER'S heroine, "You Know Me," has been reincarnated. It's the same new, you say? Yes, it is! Intensely human, this book is a type of baseball. Rookie pitcher Lardner has a couple of years' experience with diplomats, and he's a pretty good one.

 JACK DEMPSEY'S proposed trip to Africa to hunt the jolly old Nubian lion reminds us that Tom Heehey once went on a lion hunt, too. . . . and came back and said it was no fun at all. . . . that the lions wouldn't even get out of your way. . . . and you had to sock them with a ball bat before they would show enough interest to look at you. . . . The sleepy lions probably will remind Jack of some of the bouts he has refereed, including the Billy Wallace-Joe Goodman quadrille the other night in Cleveland. . . . Jack Dempsey looks very self-conscious as a referee. . . . Between the rounds he stands in a neutral corner and looks around here and there, making every effort to be nonchalant. . . . but finds it impossible. . . . Refereeing is a strange role for that chap. . . . We don't like to see him standing in a neutral corner, looking up at the ceiling. . . . after getting an indelible picture of the look on his face when he crawled back into the ring after Luis Angel Firpo had knocked him out of there.

Whiz! came that old fast one and Koenig dribbled one to short and the inning was over. "How did you feel when Ruth came up there to swing?" we asked him. "I didn't care who he was," replied Glenn Liehardt, Jr. "I gave him a fast one to start on and he fouled it off. I gave him a change of pace and Bishop (the second baseman) tossed him off. I did the same with Gehrig. Bishop got him, too."

Flowers, Dougan Head Card Tonight

Four Other Fights Are Offered in 23-Round Show

Boxing fans will see twenty-three rounds of fighting when they attend the weekly show at the Hope skating rink tonight. Fight promoters Leo Robins and Robert Campbell have five bouts listed on the fight card, and much action is promised the fans when Ernie Flowers, Little Rock, and LeRoy Dougan, of Blytheville, clash in a ten round battle which is the main event of the evening.

Flowers and Dougan fought to a draw in Little Rock last week and tonight's fight is expected to settle the question of which is the better. This will be their initial appearance before Hope fans, and much interest is centered around these two leather pushers.

The show will open tonight with a battle royal between several negro boxers, followed by a three round tussle between Fred Walker and Erle Johnson. In the next three-rounder Bert Mauldin is scheduled to fight Jim Stroud which promises to be good.

Howard Lamb and Cecil Walker will go on in a three round engagement.

Sport Spants

At the outset, anyway, it looks like a left-handed season in the major leagues. The first abbreviated, storm-swept week of the campaign witnessed brilliant pitching performances by Rob-

Willie Glenn, Hope negro, will battle "Big John" Denson in a four-round scrap. These bouts are being sponsored by the local post of the American Legion, with Leo Robins and Robert Campbell as promoters, who are making an effort to bring some of the best fighters in the southwest here.

Local fans will see Johnny Hall, Little Rock negro, and a great drawing card in action next Thursday night provided that he can be matched with any negro in his weight. Promoter Robins said today that Hall probably would fight an El Dorado negro, his name to be announced later.

The Giants depend on three south-paws, Hubbell, Walker and Pratt, to keep them in the race. Elliott and Clark are Brooklyn portside aces. Whitehill is the mainstay of the Tiger staff. The Pirates count heavily upon French and Petty.

The Yankees have Zachary, Wells and Penneck for left-handed mound chores but Penneck is about through and Zachary, despite an exceptional year in 1929, cannot toil regularly. The Yankees, if they go anywhere in the race this year, must get right-handed effectiveness from Phipps, Hoyt and Sherid. . . . Southern Methodist University rapidly is striding along the path that leads to a conspicuous place in the national collegiate spotlight.

The Mustangs take on Notre Dame and the Navy this year in two of the football schedule's outstanding intercollegiate engagements and Ray Morrison, the S. M. U. gridiron mentor, is a central figure in the mid-summer coaching school to be conducted at Dallas, July 1-14.

Flanking Morrison in the assembly of experts engaged for the summer sessions are Howard Jones, Southern California's famous football coach, and Ward Lambert, who tutored Purdue's Big Ten basketball champions last winter.

The Carnera fistic circus picked a bad spot to tip its hand—Oakland, California, just across the bay from San Francisco and in the center of an area that is as "fight-wise" as any we can think of offhand.

The Pacific Coast territory has been "worked" by experts, going back to the palmy days of Jim Coff-roth and Tex Rickard. The critical row around the ring sides has seen the best of them come and go, so that it required no microscopic eyes to detect the irregularities in the Carnera-Chevalier act.

Everything was all right in Oakland, it seems, until the negro Chevalier started throwing earnest punches to the Carnera jaw. . . . This is reminiscent of the night in Paris when the late, ill-fated Battling Siki double-crossed Georges Carpentier and beat the Orchid man to a frazzle for the light heavyweight championship instead of carrying out the original agreement to take it on the chin.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
NATALIE CONVERSE tries to convince Alan that she is a prizefighter. But they quarrel over HERNANDINE LAMONT, a young girl who has been the latter's ally in looking after her son, BOBBY, whose father had saved Alan's life during the war. Alan tries to explain that the doctor had given HERNANDINE only a short time to live, but Natalie's rebuffs cause him to lose his temper and erupting from his secretary, PHILIPPA WEST, who is waiting for the opportunity to vent her feelings on the breach between Alan and Natalie by showing her a letter from HERNANDINE in which she thanks him for the toys he has given her. However, an explanation and a reconciliation are restored harmony to the couple and Phillipa is furious. She changes an order of Alan's for a bridge party and hears another woman boast that Alan has sent her a check. Alan is angry and refuses to believe her denial. Angered, Alan takes Phillipa out again and wonders if he could love the girl when she coyly refuses his kisses. On returning home he finds Natalie packing to leave and they quarrel bitterly and wounded pride prevents either one from seeking a reconciliation.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

IT WAS BOBBY LAMONT'S voice that came to Alan over the wire. Bobby, lonesome and left alone by the servant who was filling Natalie's place on her night out, followed a childish impulse to talk with his best friend.
"Why don't you come over to see me, Uncle Alan?" he demanded in the shrill treble a child uses at the telephone. "I'm awful lonesome."
He went right on talking without giving Alan a chance to reply.
"If you'll come over I'll let you look at the new boxin' gloves you sent me, Uncle Alan."
"How about putting them on for a few rounds, old man?"
"Oooooo! Will you?"
"Do right over, Sonny."
Alan didn't know why he promised, unless it was that he didn't want to go to bed, and there was nothing else to do at home. He had tried to read on the train, and found it impossible to become interested in the news. Magazines and books had even less appeal.
Bobby was at the front door to welcome him when he arrived. The boy had on his sleeping suit and a bright red sweater pulled awkwardly over it. His arms were filled with boxing gloves.
"I bring down yours too," he said, and dropped them all to go to Alan and get his customary pig toss.
"Why the sporty costume?" Alan asked, when he put Bobby on the floor again.

"It's in trainin'!" Bobby proudly announced. "It's reducin' my tummy. Nellie says I ain't built like a prizefighter."
Alan looked him over with mock seriousness. "Never mind Nellie, but they don't know much about men. Why just look at your should-ers!" he patted the boy admiringly; "when you stand like that, Bobby, you're a future champion."
Bobby straightened up until he leaned over backward. "Come on, get your gloves, Uncle Alan," he exclaimed happily, "and let's work out."
"You mean 'lets have a work-out'?" Alan corrected.
He carried the boy upstairs pick-nick, and so thoroughly enjoyed himself during the "workout" they had, that he only thought of Natalie half the time.
But Bobby tired finally, and Alan had to let the maid put him to bed.

AFTER that he wandered home, and went to bed himself, to toss and turn, and seek vainly to escape his thoughts. Just before daylight, he fell asleep. When he awoke, he had only 20 minutes to catch his train.
He rushed out into the hall and called to Frances. When she came up, he gave her his instructions through a crack in the bathroom door. "Bring up a cup of coffee and put it down somewhere; then call me a taxi. Tell them I've got to make the next train."
He didn't want to be late. The preceding day, when he'd missed his regular train, he found so many people waiting in his office to see him, that he had to give up most of his lunch time to unfinished morning business. Even then he had an uneasy conscience concerning several neglected matters.
Natalie certainly picked out a nice time to put the skids under him. He reflected bitterly, as he tried to check the flow of blood from a small cut on his chin. "With the market behaving like a prima donna, I'm half licked to begin with."
Frances brought up a toasted bacon sandwich with the coffee. Natalie had insisted upon it; she said the poor man ought to have something. Alan tried to eat in snatches while he dressed.
On the train he suffered an attack of indigestion and began to feel sorry for himself again.
WHEN he reached the office he was as cross as a bear with a sore toe, and didn't know when he would write to Natalie. Phillipa was unobtrusively patient with him. She knew Natalie had gone. Alan had told her, very sketchily, the day before. Phillipa had sensed he was not interested at the time in her reaction to the information, so she concealed it from him.

Today it was just the same, except near closing time. Alan was getting his hat and coat, when the prospect of dining alone suddenly became unbearable to him.
He rang for Phillipa. She came in, ready for the street.
"Dine with me?" Alan said briefly.
Phillipa hesitated, a trifle offended. She made a quick recovery and was considering some way of accepting that wouldn't make her appear too willing when Alan smoothed the way for her.
"It will be an act of mercy," he said earnestly.
"Of course, I'll go," Phillipa said, and so intoned the words that Alan thought her decision was warmly impulsive.

After dinner they went to the theater, then to a club to dance. Alan got home too tired to sit up and write a letter. Not only that, he wasn't certain of what he wanted to say to Natalie. He was fearful of spoiling their chance of future happiness together by encouraging her in her unreasonable-ness.
She should, he felt, be allowed time to realize what a goose she was. Still, he wanted very much to write to her. His eyes turned often to his desk in the corner, while he was getting ready for bed, but he resisted the temptation.
Just before he fell asleep he thought of Phillipa, of her un-failing understanding. For one thing, she had not nagged him for argu-ing with the waiter over a minor matter, he recalled.
"She's a real girl," was his grate-ful verdict. "She knew well enough that I realized I was making a fool of myself. If Natalie only had half her sense . . ."
THE uncompleted thought was with him in the morning. He greeted Phillipa with a touch of warmth, when he paused at her desk on the way to his office.
She smiled brightly and Alan was reminded vaguely of morning glories; of some shining cheerfulness. There was not even a shadow of fatigue about her.
True, she hadn't had to commute such a distance after her night of pleasure, as Alan had, but her re-laxation was due less to the sleep she'd had than to her pleasant frame of mind.

And then there had been the warm bath her mother had pre-pared for her at exactly the tem-perature she liked best. She had to wake her mother up when she got home, and ask to have it ready, but Phillipa didn't mind the bother of that. It gave her a few minutes more to luxuriate in bed in the morning.
She had heard her father grum-bling when her mother went for the big fleecy towel, one of those that belonged exclusively to Phillipa, which she had been warming in the kitchen—the bathroom being heated only by a steam pipe. Phillipa had laughed good-naturedly at her father. She could afford to be toler-ant, she told herself. Alan's wife had carried out her oftentimes re-peated threat at last. He was no woman's man now.

Why shouldn't she be in a gala mood? Why shouldn't she look bright and shining? She was con-solous, as Alan gazed at her, that he knew she was these things. She felt no need to hide it from him.
"You're looking as fresh as a daisy," Alan told her approvingly. "No one would guess you'd danced until one o'clock this morning."
"I don't get tired when I'm hav-ing a lovely time," Phillipa replied.
"But you were out with a terrible grouch," Alan said.
Phillipa's eyes grew melligly tender as she looked back at him. "I thought you were splendid," she said softly.
Alan laughed, a bit self-con-sciously. "I'm glad you weren't annoyed with me," he said, and stopped. Happening to glance quickly toward the outer office he noticed several of his employes were watching him.
"I'll be ready for you in about 10 minutes," he said, turning back to Phillipa.
Two or three of the stenogra-phi-sts smiled, that all-wise smile, when Phillipa powdered her nose and rouged her lips afresh as soon as Alan had disappeared into his private office.
She didn't care if they understood her gesture. She had the power to discharge anyone of them. They might as well learn now she con-sidered Alan Converse her own par-ticular game. It would soon be-come known that Natalie had left him.
With the first sound of the sum-mons to his office she arose, pad in hand, and looked back at the girls with an air of triumph.

Kelvinator Gives New Finance Plan

Hope Furniture Company Announces Reduced Schedules

A new easy payment plan on Kel-vinator electric refrigerators is to-day announced by the Hope Furniture company, local Kelvinator dealer.
By a down payment of less than $10 and monthly payments of less than $12, it is now possible for anyone in this community to equip his home with a new 1930 model Kelvinator electric refrigerator.
According to Terrel Cornelius, this easy payment plan marks a new step in the electric refrigeration industry and will undoubtedly cause a great many people to modernize their homes this year with Kelvinators.
"The new Kelvinator models are now on display at our store," said Mr. Cornelius, "and the public is cordially invited to inspect them and see for themselves the latest innova-tions in modern refrigeration. One of the outstanding features of the new Kelvinator models is the Sso-Ther-mic Tube compartment in which, without any adjustments whatever, ice can be made in approximately one hour, the fastest freezing time ever achieved by any electric refrigerator.

In a debutante it's Charm

in a cigarette it's Taste

MANY FINE QUALITIES make up the "charm" that is Miss America's, but her genuine wholesomeness appeals most of all.

IN A CIGARETTE, TOO, the real appeal is whole-someness of taste.

WITNESS CHESTERFIELD'S popularity, growing every day. No flash in the pan, but enduring popular-ity, earned by giving smokers a cigarette of better quality, richer aroma and finer fragrance, blended and cross-blended to just one end . . . "TASTE above everything".

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield cigarettes are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price. LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

Gains Fistic Fame After Passing 80

Indian Fighter Shows Youngsters How To Battle

FRESNO, Cal., May 7.—Although "Uncle" Tom Helebathelewaite fought in '75 with Custer, he had to live to be 80 years of age and a gasoline service station owner and receive a 10-day suspended sentence in justice court to achieve a local reputation as a fighter.

Uncle Tom, it appears from the records of the court of Justice of the Peace G. W. Smith, was peacefully attending his service station in the northeast section of town when a veritable infant, Alex Chabrouillaud, 26, bought 10 gallons of gasoline.

Uncle Tom supplied it gladly and then respectfully requested his money, $1.80. The youth, instead, started paying the aged man off with vile language, the court records indicate.

Uncle Tom happens to be an even six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds, none of it fat. Let him tell the rest of the story.

"I walked up to him and asked him to calm down. Instead he made two passes at me, both of which I dodged. I then unlocked a right to the pit of the stomach and he went down for count. It is unfortunate this happened, but I had to defend myself."

In court Uncle Tom was gently reproved and the suspended sentence passed. But Uncle Tom received his $1.80 in small chain court.

His neighbors at once invited him to a dinner in his honor.

Uncle Tom has had many an experience with young men who knew his age and attempted to take advantage of what they assumed would be his feebleness. The last time before the court incident was with a youth of barely voting age.

The youngster had his girl friend with him, and apparently for her edification flashed a $20 bill on Uncle Tom for the gas. The aged Indian dian fighter started to go next door to get change.

"This is some dump, where you can't get change," the youngster opined, adding a few verbal flourishes that roused the Helebathelewaite resentment.

Uncle Tom's chaste reply as reported by observers was:

"Young man, you look about 21 or 22 to me. Anyway, you're in your prime. I tell you what I'll do. Let this girl be the judge."

"You step out of the car, and if I don't turn you over my knee with perfect ease and spank you until you cry, you can take the gas without charge and I'll give you one better and give you a supply of oil."

"If I do it, you give me permission to get the change next door and everything will be all right."

The youth remained in the car and made no comment whatever when he was paid his $19 and some cents all in pennies.

Almost any of Uncle Tom's neighbors and friends will tell you with a twinkling eye that doubtless Uncle Tom does lose a little business by his brusque and forceful enforcement of his merchandising policies. But they'll also tell you that he gains more than he loses, since his clientele numbers many admirers of his forthright ways and speech.

Dear Folks:

Balmy days are here again, and just when everyone seems to be on their way to the fishing streams or the swimming holes I have to help the boss. You see it's like this.

There are lots of folks who want us to renovate their last summer's linen and summer weight clothes. We make a specialty of this kind of work, and the boss won't let me go fishing.

Delicate fabrics, ladies summer dresses, etc., are snowing me under. This shop must have a reputation for this kind of work, we get so much of it.

Yours truly,

Gold Star Mothers Off on Pilgrimage

First Contingent of 224 Sail for Battlefields of Europe

NEW YORK, May 8.—American gold-star mothers and widows began their pilgrimage to the poppy-covered cemeteries of France and Belgium Wednesday.

Two hundred and forty-four women, the first contingent of approximately 7000, boarded the liner America for a trip which will allow them to visit the graves of their loved ones. They will make the journey at the expense of the government which has appropriated about $840 per person for those who will visit eight American cemeteries this summer and during the summer of 1931, 1932 and 1933.

Weekly hereafter, until August 30, the pilgrims, some hardly strong enough for the trip, will sail from New York, each group will be absent a month. The army, has undertaken their guardianship and responsibility. Each mother of Wednesday's delegation will be given a bronze medal of which is superimposed a gold star, the gift of the United States lines, who are conducting the pilgrimage.

It is planned that each unit will spend two days in Paris to rest and then go to the cemeteries. Most of the delegation will go to the Meuse-Argon cemetery, the largest; the Alsne-Marne at Belleau; Oise Aisne at Serinnes-Et Nesles; and Surmeses cemetery near Paris.

Specially selected army officers, one officer to each 25 women, will accompany them.
